

Research

preliminary hearing is not a trial, but a presentation of evidence by prosecutors who want the judge to hold a suspect for trial. If the evidence seems sufficient, an arraignment will be scheduled so the accused can enter a plea, arrange bail and receive a trial date.